

Dr. Pushpa Arabindoo

Lecturer, Department of Geography

UCL Urban Lab, London

Email Id: p.arabindoo@ucl.ac.uk

Pushpa Arabindoo initially trained in architecture (Chennai, India) before getting an MS in Urban Design (Pratt Institute, New York, USA) and a PhD in Planning (LSE, London, UK). Since 2008, she is a lecturer in Geography and Urban Design at UCL Department of Geography, and is a co-director of the interdisciplinary UCL Urban Laboratory. She also serves as an editor at the CITY Journal. Cutting across the interdisciplinary realms of architecture, humanities and social sciences, she draws from her long-standing research on one particular city (Chennai) to contribute to critical urban studies and planning debates including bourgeois urbanism, ecological imaginations, informality, and more recently on transitional energy. She is currently working on her monograph on Chennai.
